

COMMENT OF THE DAY

Dual Purpose

THE central purpose of the policy of the Anglo-Franco-American partnership is, in a familiar phrase, the "lessening of international tension." It could hardly be otherwise. For such a lessening would be — economically, politically and socially — in the interest of all three countries. The thesis that the policy of all three governments is controlled by the "Monopolists"; that their power and their profits are dependent on the armament expenditure that results from tension; that they are planning to "unleash a third world war" in the belief that it would bring them even greater power and greater profits; all this is an attractive and sometimes effective theme for Communist propaganda. But it does not bear cool examination. Capitalist profits from the manufacture of arms are, even at a peak of rearmament, a small proportion of the whole. Capitalism has many ways of making profits (whether they be regarded as the reward of enterprise or as a result of exploitation) and Western Germany is at the moment an outstanding proof that the "capitalist class" and the "monopolists" can be exceedingly prosperous in a country which has no armed forces and no armaments industry.

A PART from other considerations (and there are many) a lessening of international tensions would be a direct and immediate economic advantage not only to the "workers" but to the "capitalists" of Britain, France and the United States. It is demanded by the coldest self-interest as well as by other reasons. That it should be the objective of the policy of the three governments is dictated by facts as well as by feeling. Yet the ending of tension and the elimination of conflict between the Communist and "Capitalist" countries can hardly be looked for so long as it is a basic principle of Communist thinking that such a conflict between the "two camps" is an historical duty, and the function of the Soviet Union is to be "a powerful and open base for a world revolutionary movement," and to "raise revolt in other countries" — the words are Lenin's. But though this may have to be accepted and faced there is the further consideration that the immediate interests of the Soviet Union may seem in the eyes of its rulers to call not for the abandonment of that long-term objective, but for its temporary suspension.

THE thinking behind all the recent three power discussions both before and at the London meeting of the foreign ministers is that this possibility must be explored. It is only a possibility. Because of their methods, so little is known of the working of the minds of the Soviet leaders. But it is a possibility which cannot be neglected. That was the starting point and the note delivered to Moscow a week ago was the immediate outcome. The note has a double purpose. The one is to find, if possible, solutions for problems which vex and trouble not only the peoples immediately concerned, but all of Europe. But the other is wider. It is to test and explore the possibility of holding reasonable and not unfriendly negotiations with the Russians; to ascertain if there is a real chance of a relaxation of tension; and to discover whether there is now hope for "agreements of a more or less prolonged character" even though they might necessarily have to be "within the limits permitted by the two systems of government."

INHUMAN TREATMENT OF

Dramatic Exposure Of
Extorted Germ
Warfare Confessions
FACTS PRESENTED TO UN

New York, Oct. 26.

The United States charged today that Soviet "personnel" directed the extortion of confessions to waging germ warfare from captured American airmen in Korea.

Opening the debate in the Political Committee of the United Nations General Assembly, Dr Charles Mayo, of the United States, said that in some cases the confessions of the airmen were made after the Korean armistice was signed.

He submitted sworn statements from the fliers made after their repatriation.

"Does this not raise a question in our minds?" the United States representative asked. "How seriously do the Communists take the armistice agreement? Their guns cease firing but still — to the very moment of repatriation — they torture the bodies and minds of prisoners to get ammunition for their spurious propaganda war."

Dr Mayo, an eminent American physician, said that the confessions from the airmen were obtained by the scientific method of the "conditioned reflex" developed by the Soviet biologist Pavlov.

The United States asked the Committee to indicate in its report to the General Assembly that it had received statements from the airmen repudiating the confessions and detailing the methods by which they were obtained. The confessions were circulated in the United Nations last spring by the Soviet delegate.

The United States also asked the Committee to note that the United States, the Republic of Korea, and Japan had agreed to an investigation of the Communist charges, as called for in a resolution adopted by the General Assembly last April, while the Chinese Communists and the North Koreans had as yet not replied.

Dr Mayo said one of the purposes of the "germ warfare" propaganda drive was to discredit the United States in the eyes of the free world.

The American delegate began by reviewing the history of the germ warfare charges since the first was made by North Korea in May, 1951. He recalled the denials by United States and United Nations officials and a resolution passed by the General Assembly last April calling for an impartial investigation behind both front lines by Pakistan, Sweden, Uruguay, Brazil and Egypt. Only the Soviet group voted against the resolution.

NOT SUDDEN IDEA

Dr Mayo said two significant events had occurred since last April. First, Communist China and North Korea had never agreed to permit such an investigation and, second, the six American fliers whose confessions served as a basis for the Communist charges had been repatriated after the armistice.

Dr Mayo sketched briefly the statements made by the repatriated fliers on their return, and concluded: "From these few instances, it becomes clear that the so-called 'germ warfare' confessions were not simply a sudden bright idea on the part of the Communists, but were an integral part of a tremendous and calculated campaign of lies and that in this campaign of lies, the Communists used carefully worked out techniques and a considerable body of trained personnel in order to break the bodies and souls of men and thus fulfill their plans."

In analysing the techniques used, Dr Mayo said they were subtle, prolonged and calculated to disintegrate the mind of an intelligent victim. It was a method designed so that a few hours uninterrupted sleep or a dry crust of bread were great events in the life of a victim.

"The total picture presented is one of human beings reduced to a status lower than that of animals: filthy, full of lice, festering wounds full of maggots; their sickness regulated to a point just short of death, up-shaven, without haircuts or baths for as much as a year; men in rags, exposed to the elements; fed with carefully measured minimum quantities and lowest quality of food and unsanitary water, served often in rusty cans; isolated, 'fixed' with squads of trained interrogators; bullied incessantly, deprived of sleep and brow-beaten into mental anguish," the United States representative said.

THE TECHNIQUE

Dr Mayo said this suggested that the Communists were deliberately perverting to their own ends the technique which the famous Soviet biologist Pavlov used in his experiments on dogs and rats.

"This technique, as you all know, is called the 'conditioned reflex,'" he said. "When a rat goes through the wrong door, he gets an electric shock. When he goes through the right door he gets a bit of cheese. Before long you can dispense with the cheese because the rat has been conditioned to enter the door you want him to enter."

"This is the very technique which the Communists appear to have used on their intended germ warfare victims. Resistance was punished with kicks and slaps in the face, with worsened living conditions, with food rations lowered and still further with threats of death."

"Signs of co-operation, on the other hand, were rewarded with slight increases in rations, with promises of better treatment and so on."

It was surprising that so many of the soldiers treated in that way had managed to resist, Dr Mayo said.

The extorted confessions were a small part of a larger political programme, Dr Mayo said. There were four implications in that programme.

"First, the purpose was to discredit the United States in the eyes of the free world and thus to help isolate it from its Allies."

"Second, Communist treatment of prisoners, both in World War II and in the Korean War, has consistently followed a policy of using these prisoners to advance the military, economic, and especially the political objectives of Soviet Communist policy."

"Third, in the practice of Moscow and her Allies, the 'confession' is a prime propaganda instrument to support the policy objectives of the moment."

"Fourth, the 'germ warfare' propaganda campaign is the very type of activity that stems from the essential doctrines of Soviet Leninism and Stalinism concerning truth and morality. Any means, and deceit, any brutality, is justified by the Communists if they think it contributes to the victory of Communism."

In conclusion, Dr Mayo said: "Peace and tranquillity will continue to be our goal, but will not be achieved in any true sense as long as material, life powerful nations are guided by false ideologies."

"What has been perpetrated on the free world as far as bacteriological warfare is concerned, serves, I fear, as great but only additional evidence that the time is not ripe to accept with any sense of security their word that peaceful conditions will be honestly accepted or adhered to. When that time comes, we must have ironclad safeguards."

NO FACTUAL BASIS

In reviewing briefly the sworn statements made by the repatriated fliers, Dr Mayo declared that one of them, Colonel Walker Mahurin, agreed to sign a confession in May, 1951.

"Until the very day of his repatriation five weeks after the armistice, he was engaged in writing and rewriting statements about germ warfare which his captors themselves admitted to him had no basis in fact," Dr Mayo said.

Another example, he said, was the case of Colonel Andrew J. Evans, who signed a final version of a germ warfare confession on September 2, 1953, and was repatriated the next day.

"We find in this consecutive record an indication of the vast organization and elaborate method used to extract the statements which the Communists were seeking," Dr Mayo said. "Flying personnel, whether Air Force, Navy or Marine, were separated and for most of the time sent to a place near Pyongyang, which came to be known among the prisoners as 'Pals Palace'."

"This was a combined interrogation centre staffed by Chinese and North Koreans but directed by Soviet personnel. Many of our fliers were interrogated by Soviet personnel. The Chinese interrogators, one (Continued on Back Page, Oct. 31).

Strong Russian Protest
To Greece Over
NATO Bases

Moscow, Oct. 26.

The Soviet Union today lodged a strong protest with Greece against the recent agreement signed at Athens permitting the United States to use Greek air and naval bases, describing the action as "contradicting the interests of the preservation of peace and international security."

The Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister, Mr Andrei Gromyko, handed the protest to the Greek Charge d'Affaires, Mr Thomas Ypsilanti, at the Foreign Ministry.

It said: "The Soviet Government cannot but draw the attention of the Greek Government to the fact that the change of the territory of Greece into a base for the armed forces of the aggressive North-Atlantic bloc creates a threat to peace and security in the Balkans, and therefore the Greek Government must bear full responsibility for this step, which leads to a sharpening of the international situation."

The Soviet note said that conclusion of the Greek-United States agreement of October 12, under which the United States is given the right to maintain armed forces on Greek territory, "testifies that the Greek Government has begun to carry out measures which are directed at the preparation of a new war, having given the territory of Greece for use with these aims by the armed forces of the United States."

"Greek territory is changed by this into a foreign military base, contradicting the interests of the preservation of peace and international security," the note said.

UNJUSTIFIED

The stationing of foreign armed forces on Greek territory during peace time cannot be justified on the grounds of defence, because it is well known that no one threatens Greece and no one intends to attack her," the note said.

That was why it was impossible to accept the statement that the agreement with the United States served the cause of peace and the strengthening of Greek security, the note continued.

"It is quite evident that in this way the territory of Greece serves the aggressive forces of other countries," the Soviet note declared.

Princess Sees Zoo For
First Time

London, Oct. 26.

Little Princess Anne of England, now three years and two months old, paid her first visit to the London Zoo today but did not even have time to see the monkeys.

It was not an official visit. Princess Anne, accompanied by Prince Charles and their nurses, dropped in for a look at the animals. The crowds at the Zoo became much more interested in the Royal children than in the animals and after only a quarter of an hour the Prince and Princess were hustled away again by their nurses after a glance at some of the lions and tigers and birds.—France-Press.

Last British
Families
Leave Trieste

Trieste, Oct. 26.

The last train-load of British dependent families pulled out of this troubled city to complete the hurry up evacuation started eight days ago.

Lady Winterton, wife of the British Military Governor, Major-General Sir John Winterton, was among the 107 wives and 130 children seen off by their khaki-clad husbands.

By the end of the week the evacuation of American families also is expected to be complete.

At present some 200 of the 700 US families still are in the disputed city but are daily leaving for Leghorn, Italy. They are either driving their own cars or travelling aboard special coaches attached to the Leghorn express.

LOAD OFF MINDS

That's the biggest load off our minds," Lieut-Col. Harold Kitson, RE, said as he waved his wife goodbye.

"Now we have about two weeks' work to do and we shall be ready to leave when we get the word go."

This was the 20th move in seven years for Colonel Kitson's family and he was unperturbed.

There were a lot of officers' wives aboard the train and the road-off was even less emotional than in the case of the two trains and three-bus convoys that left during the past week with the rest of the 400 British families.

General Winterton declined even to shake hands with his wife for photographs. He stood back from the train and waved goodbye with a smile.

Lady Winterton appeared almost unmoved. Just before the train left a British Medical Corps Corporal presented her with a travelling clock in token of appreciation for the work she has done for the British Military Hospital.—United Press.

A Second
Atomic
Explosion
At Woomera

London, Oct. 26.

Britain has made her second atomic test on the Australian desert site.

The Ministry of Supply announced in London tonight that Sir William Penney had radioed the Minister, Mr Duncan Sandys, telling him that the second major explosion had been made successfully at the atomic test site in Australia at 2130 GMT today—7 a.m. Tuesday, October 27, Central Australian time.

Commenting on the announcement, Mr Sandys said: "The object of this second major explosion was to obtain certain important scientific information which we required in connection with our weapons programme. During the last few weeks, our scientists have carried out various other trials involving a number of minor explosions."

"This completes the programme of experiments as planned and brings the present series of tests to an end."

"I wish to congratulate the technical staff at Woomera and the experimental establishment here in Britain on the success of these important trials, which is the result of brilliant scientific work over a long period," Mr Sandys said.

Sir Winston Churchill, the British Prime Minister, was immediately informed of the latest explosion.

He has been kept in close touch with all the experiments undertaken on the Woomera range.—Reuter.

ATOMIC STATIONS

There was no reason why, before long, atomic power stations should not make a useful addition to British power resources, the Minister of Fuel and Power, Mr Geoffrey Lloyd, said in the House of Commons today.

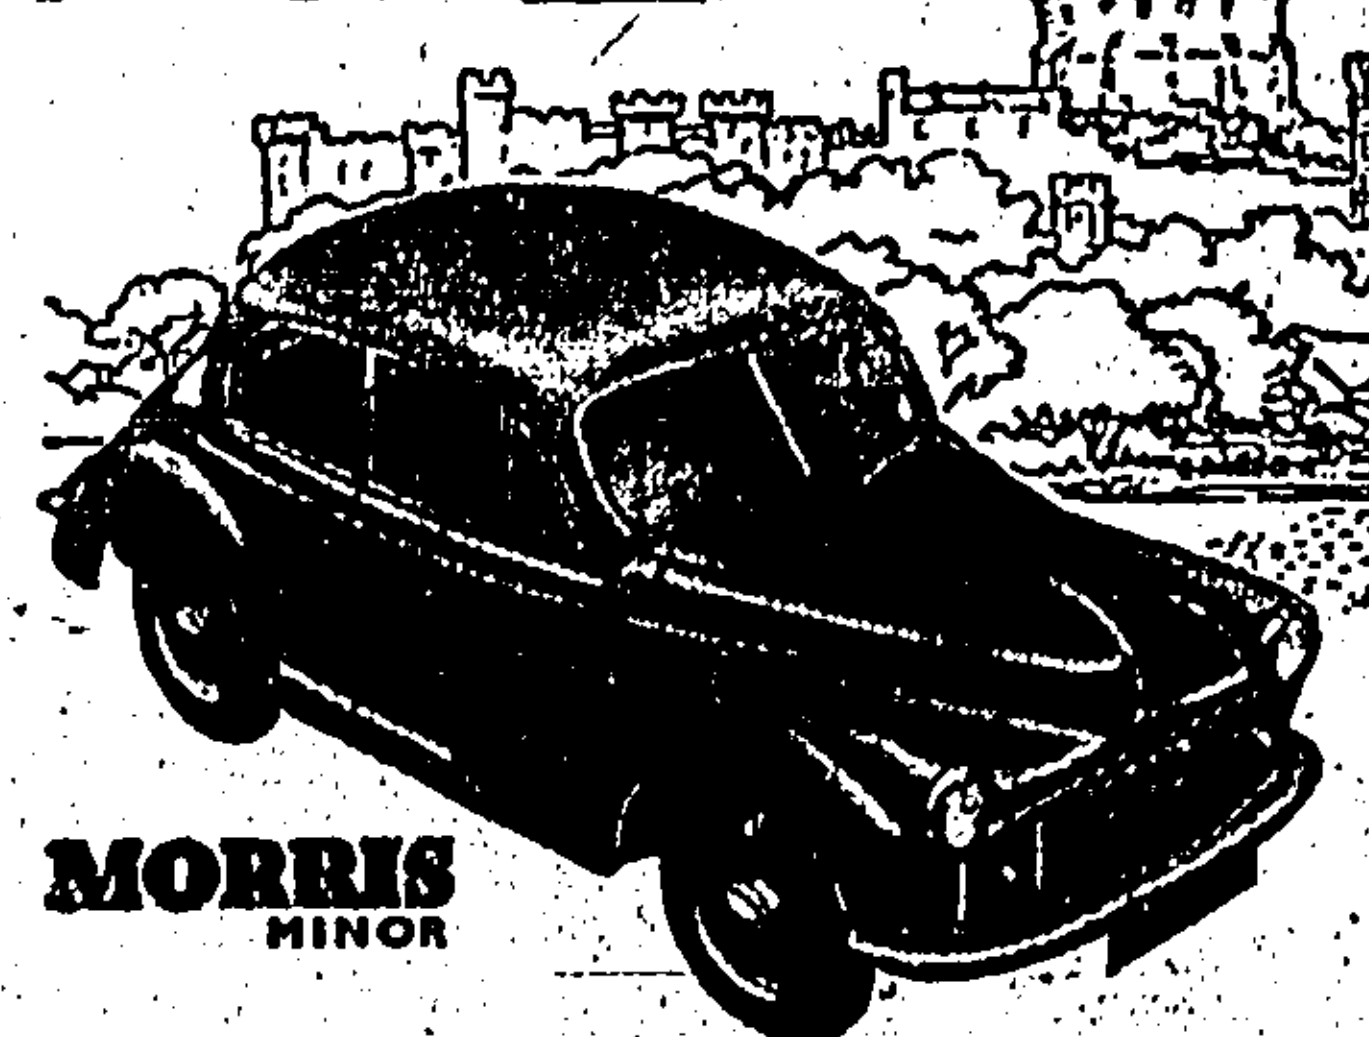

Mr Lloyd revealed that a new nuclear establishment at Calder Hall, Cumberland, and a new breeder-reactor were likely to produce about 50,000 kilowatts. The Minister declared it was too early to say "what contribution we shall get from atomic power stations, and when they will begin to make a significant contribution to our problems."—France-Press.

Anglo-U.S. Atomic Pact Said Near

By HAROLD GUARD

London, Oct. 26.

An Anglo-American pact on atomic energy development is believed to be in the making, qualified observers said today.

Since the return from Washington of Lord Cherwell, atomic energy adviser to the Prime Minister, Sir Winston Churchill, they said, there has been enough evidence to bear out conjectures that Russia's progress in atomic energy had provided the spur for the conclusion of such a pact, long deferred for security reasons.

The sources said it was already significant that British and American research into the military uses of atomic energy had followed identical paths. There had been particularly close co-operation of programmes than is admitted publicly, an observer said.

Britain has concentrated on atomic explosives, also has continued to concentrate on strategic weapons, and explosives of greater scope.

This, the observers said, indicated a co-ordinated plan but it was believed this both sides wanted to make this a more formal arrangement.

The United States, although making progress in smaller atomic explosives, also has continued to concentrate on strategic weapons, and explosives of greater scope.

Qualified observers said that the co-ordination of British and American atomic energy development was also evident in its peaceful applications. Britain is preparing to build stationary power plants for the production of electric power whereas America, although an- nounced power plant plans, has gone further than Britain to- ward the development of atomic energy for propulsion.

America's refusal to return to the wartime pooling of atomic energy with the Mac-Mahon Act of 1946, the observer said, had been a sore point among Britain's scientists.

Britain's security arrange- ments had frequently let her down just when American opinion appeared to be veering toward changing the Act. The security breaches by British nuclear scientists Alan Nunn May and Klaus Fuchs and the disappearance of Italian-born scientist Bruno Pontecorvo all tended to undermine America's desire to share atomic secrets with Britain.

Last month eight members of the United States Commission on Atomic Energy came to Britain for discussions on an Anglo-American exchange of information.

During their visit 200 electri- cians, obedient to the Com- munist-led Electricals' Trade Union, went on strike at the Aldermaston research station at Aldermaston.

This was followed by Dr Boris Davison of Britain's atomic centre in Harwell being given a year's leave of absence be- cause he was Russian, with relatives in the Soviet Union.

These events, observers said, did not help convince the Senators and Representatives that Britain's security forces could be relied upon.

However, observers believe that there were factors working the other way and illustrated by the fact that the Americans followed up their visit to Britain by touring South African gold mines where uranium is produced.

SUFFICIENT CAUSE

They said that America had only minor deposits of uranium and that their main supplies came from the Belgian Congo, South Africa, Canada and Australia—the last three being Commonwealth members.

Observers believe that the question of uranium supplies, the effort to prevent duplication of experiments and Russia's progress in atomic energy were sufficient reason now for Britain and America reaching accord.

They said that reliable reports now indicated that President Eisenhower intends to ask Con- gress to relax the MacMahon law and that he would probably seek to reserve to himself the right to approve sharing certain classes of information on atomic develop- ment with Britain.—United Press.

ENGINEERS IN DEMAND

Vienna, Oct. 26.
A Soviet-owned firm is recruiting Austrian engineers in Vienna for work in Hungarian armament factories, the inde- pendent newspaper Die Presse reported today.

The engineers were offered a total monthly salary of about £220.

Their political past appeared to be of no interest to their new employers, as there was only one Communist among 25 recently engaged, the newspaper said.—Reuter.

Wanted Husband To Beat Her

London, Oct. 26.
An Australian airman's marriage had broken down because his wife wanted him to beat her, Mr Justice Bernard said in the Divorce Court today.
The husband, Leonard Ernest Cox, an Australian formerly of the RAAF and now a Corporal in the Royal Air Force in England, was granted a decree nisi because of his wife's desertion.
A charge of cruelty brought by Mrs. Joan Mabel Cox, of Fairview Road, Norbury, London, was dismissed.
The judge exercised dis- cretion in respect of Cox's admitted adultery.—China Mail Special.

Singapore's Amazing Birth-Rate

Singapore, Oct. 26.
Singapore's birth-rate is now nearly three times that of Britain, said Dr W. J. Vickers, Director of Medical Services, today.

He disclosed this at a Press conference to emphasise the congestion in the Maternity Hospital. He added that "this extraordinary birth-rate" has forced medical authorities here to run their services on almost an emergency basis.

Dr Vickers revealed that Singapore's birth-rate is nearly 48 per thousand. The com- parative figures in Britain are 17 per thousand.

"To make matters worse," he said, "the death rate has gone down and is now similar to that of England and Wales."

Dr Vickers said that if Singa- pore had a similar birth-rate as Britain the Government could deal very comfortably with every birth here.

"Even if our birth-rate is similar to that of New Zealand, which is 24 per thousand, we can still deal very satisfactorily with the situation," he said.

Dr Vickers said that the Government Maternity Hospi- tal is consequently faced with entries which mounted by leaps and bounds and the stage has been reached where the present building is not able to contain more staff or patients.

There are 240 beds in the hospital compared with 160 be- fore the war.

Plans envisage an additional 600 beds for two hospitals in the Colony.—United Press.

American-Japanese Military Aid Pact Expected Soon

Washington, Oct. 23.

State Department officials said today they hoped to reach this week a military aid understanding providing United States support for an increase in Japan's home defence force.

But informed sources said that in negotiations so far between United States Defence and Economic authorities and a special Japanese mission here, it appeared that nei- ther side would get all it wanted.

It was understood that:
1.—The United States would not get the assurance of as large a defence force as it would like to see in Japan.

2.—Japan would not get a large-scale, long-term economic aid programme.

Nevertheless, informants said, the talks had basically been satisfactory and, discounting the maximum desires of both sides, should result in substantially increasing Far Eastern security and eventually taking some of the load there off the United States.

The talks opened here on October 22 with Mr Hayato Ikeda, personal representative of Premier Shigeru Yoshida, as the chief Japanese negotiator. Meanwhile, discussions toward a formal mutual security pact have been going on in Tokyo.

The Tokyo talks were described as being considered with tech- nical provisions of the pact; those in Washington with major policy decisions.

CHANGES IN BUCHAREST REPORTED

Vienna, Oct. 26.

One more Rumanian Cabinet Minister, the fifth in six weeks, has been relieved of his duties —another step in the stream- lining of the Government in the Soviet pattern.

Yesterday's Rumanian news- papers, received here today, said the Ministry of Higher Education, the Ministry of Public Education and the General Directorate of Man- power Reserves had been amalgamated into one ministry, to be known as the Education Ministry.

M. Ilie Murgulescu, until now Minister of Higher Educa- tion, is the new Education Minister. M. Ion Nistor, former Minister of Public Education, was assigned "other tasks."

The papers did not say whether M. Ion Mironescu, hitherto Director-General of Manpower Reserves, would retain the job in the new ministry.

The Rumanian Government, elected last January, has been undergoing a gradual "stream- lining" process since September 19, when M. Gheorghe Vidrascu, a Deputy Premier, was dropped. The Soviet Government underwent a similar simplifying process soon after M. Georgi Malenkov assumed the premiership, and the Czechoslovak Government followed suit.—Reuter.

Buenos Aires, Oct. 26.
A policeman chased 60-year- old Luciano Rodriguez, and caught him—but found he was arrested a dead man.

Rodriguez, a waiter, had got involved in a fist fight with another waiter outside the bar in which they were employed. When the policeman broke it up, Rodriguez took to his heels and jumped—about a—passing tram.

The policeman followed, only to discover that Rodriguez was dead of a heart attack.—China Mail Special.

A former managing director of the French Havas News Agency, M. Ernest Barthelemy, has died in Paris, aged 87. He joined the company in 1901 and headed its news services from 1914 to 1940. Differences with the Government in 1940 caused him to resign.

In 1912 and 1914 M. Barthelemy accompanied President Raymond Poincare on two visits to Russia. He was in charge of the Havas news services in 1914.—France- Presse.

Resolution On Tunisia Fails To Obtain Two-Thirds Majority

United Nations, Oct. 26. The Political Committee of the General Assembly today approved, by 29 to 22 votes, with five abstentions, an Arab-Asian resolution on Tunisia which, however will not be ratified in the plenary session as it failed to obtain the necessary two-thirds majority.

In a much shorter debate than on Morocco, the Political Committee approved the Arab-Asian resolution, which recommended that all measures should be taken to enable the Tunisian people to enjoy full sovereignty and to obtain complete independence.

As on former occasions, France was absent from the debate as a protest against this North African question being considered by the United Nations.

Cabinet To Make Vital Decision

London, Oct. 27.

The Cabinet will today decide how far it can relax existing restrictions on Britain's trade with countries of the Organisation for European Economic Co-operation (OEEC). Britain is under no obligation to attempt any further liberalisation of trade so long as it remains in heavy payments deficit with the European Payments Union.

But the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Richard Butler, is keen to do what he can, recognising the general benefit to Western Europe that will follow any easing of the present British import quota restrictions. Authoritative sources said yesterday that no decision has yet been taken on this vital issue of further trade liberalisation.

The continuing aim is to free trade with Western Europe from quota restrictions to the 75 per cent agreed as a minimum between OEEC nations.

Britain's quota of free trade percentage is now 58 as compared with 44 per cent in the autumn of 1951. But the Government is now expected to raise the percentage beyond the 58 per cent, but to a figure not yet decided by the Cabinet.

Mr. Butler will preside at the meeting of the Ministerial Council of the OEEC in Paris on Thursday and Friday. — China Mail Special.

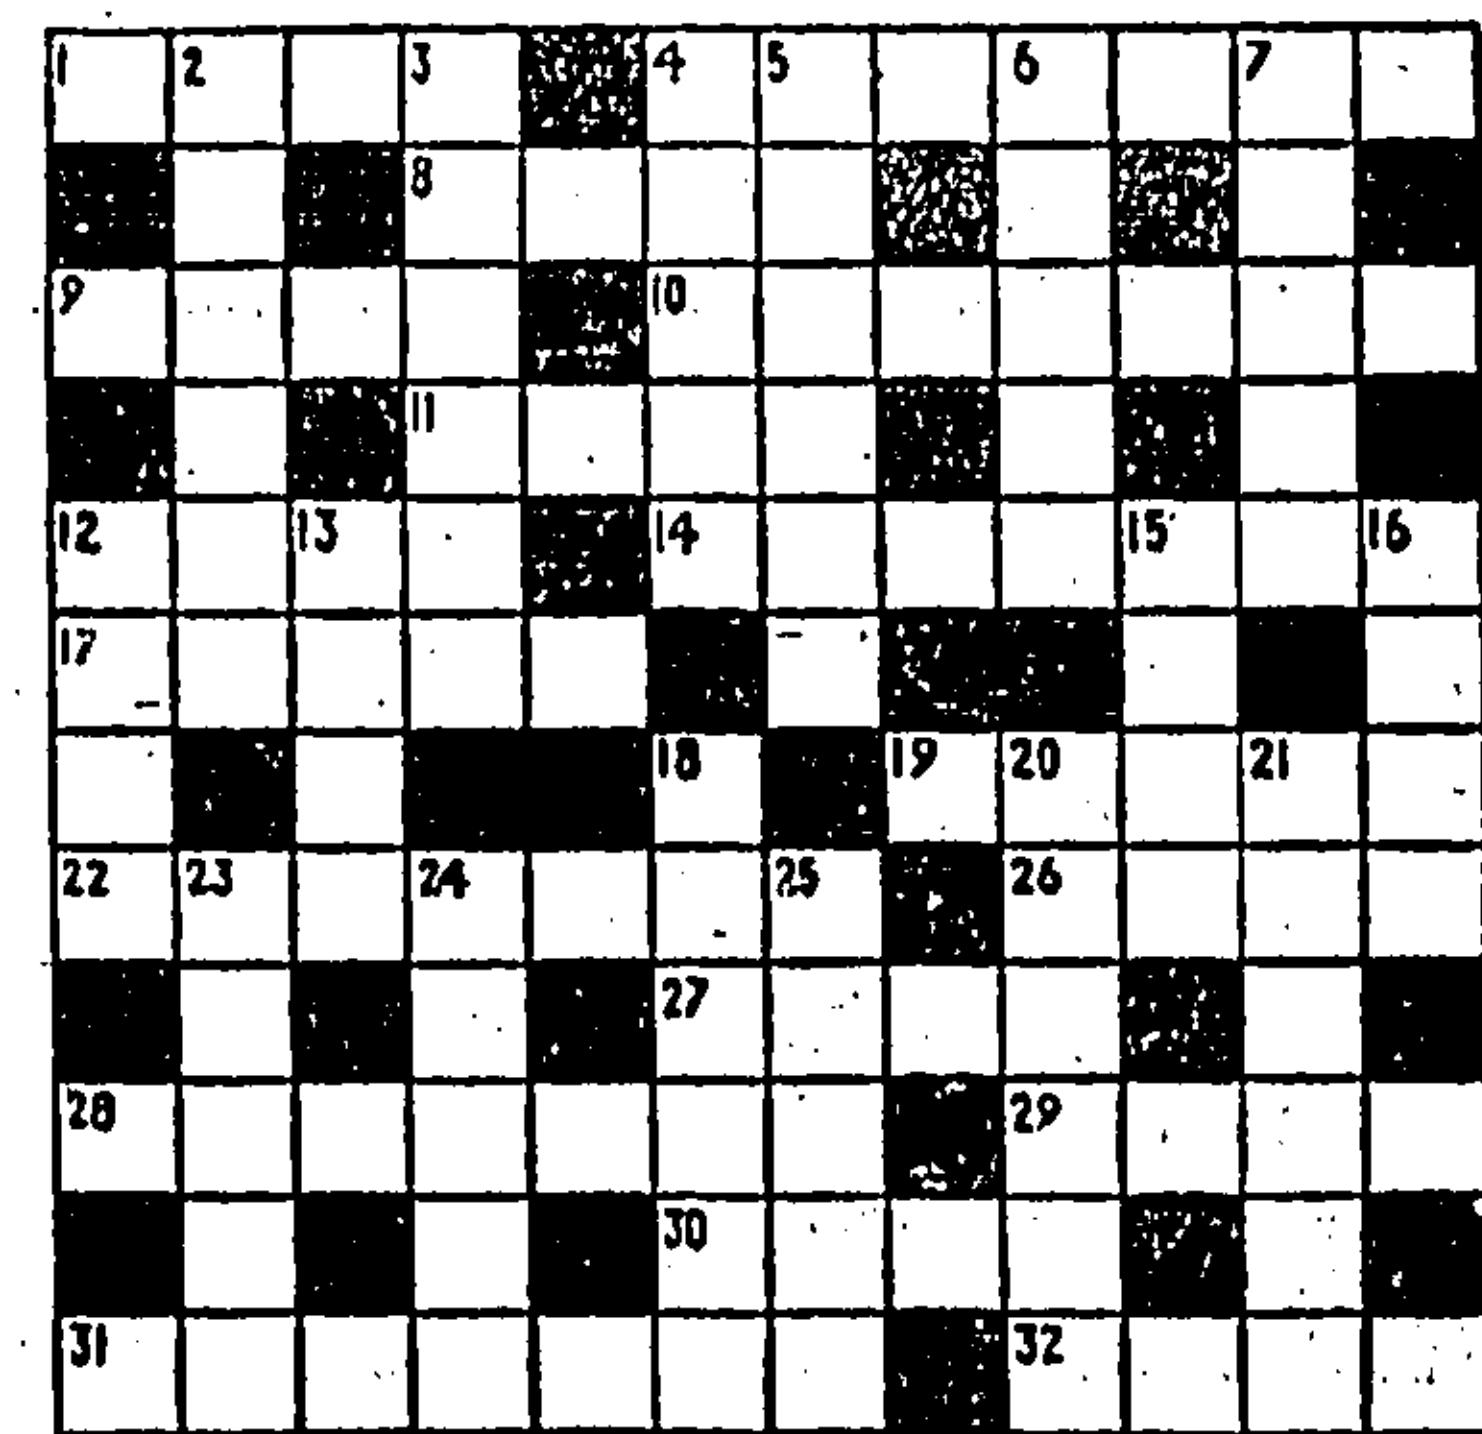

HERO'S WELCOME FOR GENERAL

New York, Oct. 26.

General William Dean got a hero's welcome in New York today after three years of imprisonment in a North Korean prison camp.

General Dean, who came here from the West Point Military Academy, was met by his wife and other members of his family at the airport. He was driven to the City Hall where a reception was held in his honour. — France-Press.

Restriction On Sale Of Gold Abandoned

Pretoria, Oct. 26.

South Africa today abandoned her self-imposed restriction that gold sold on the free market must be "processed." It was learned officially.

This means that from today South African gold sold on the free market may be in bar form and not necessarily in strips or plate.

The restriction was imposed as a gesture to the International Monetary Fund when it was first decided that South Africa would sell gold on the free market.

All other countries which adopted the same restrictions have since abandoned it. — Reuter.

THE GOTHIC SAILS FOR JAMAICA

Queen's Ship Leaves For Royal Tour

Liverpool, Oct. 26.

The 15,000-ton liner Gothic, in a new coat of white paint, sailed today from Liverpool for Jamaica where the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh will embark for their tour of Australia and New Zealand.

The Gothic will call at Portland and Tisbury.

Vice-Admiral E. M. C. Abel Smith, Flag officer of Royal Yachts, who always goes to sea when the Queen makes a voyage, called on the Lord Mayor of Liverpool, Alderman W. J. Tristram, before the ship sailed.

The Lord Mayor wished the Gothic good luck and God speed for her Royal voyage.

Vice-Admiral Abel Smith said: "We shall be rehearsing all the way round to Tisbury, dressing the ship, the Queen's arrival on board, her departure and such things as transferring mail in mid-ocean."

On board are 30 musicians of the Royal Marines band and 30 Royal Naval ratings who will man the Royal barge and maintain communications. There are 15 members of the Queen's household, including private secretaries, dressers and valets. There will also be a doctor on board and a New Zealand querry.

The Queen will fly to Jamaica. On the return voyage, the Royal couple will disembark from the Gothic at Aden to fly to Uganda and on to Tobruk. At Tobruk, they will embark on the new Royal Yacht, Britannia. — China Mail Special.

Von Paulus Released By Soviet

Berlin, Oct. 26.

Former Field-Marshal Friedrich von Paulus, Commander of the German 6th Army at Stalingrad, has returned to East Germany from the Soviet Union, the Communist East Berlin Radio announced today.

The radio said Paulus would take up residence in East Germany.

Field-Marshal von Paulus has been in Russia since his army's surrender at Stalingrad in 1942. He joined the Free German Movement, composed of German officers in Russian captivity, who declared themselves opposed to the Hitler regime.

The committee broadcast anti-Nazi programmes from the Soviet Union during the war. Paulus, now 63, was one of Hitler's foremost tank experts and served both in France and Poland during the war before being ordered to take command of the German army attacking Stalingrad. — Reuter.

MOROCCO COUP

London, Oct. 26.

Mr. Anthony Nutting, Foreign Under-Secretary, told the House of Commons today that the French Government had made no representations to the British Government before the Sultan of Morocco was deposed on August 20.

"Relations between the French Government and the Sultan of Morocco were governed by the Treaty of Fez, which was signed in 1912 between the French Government and the Sultan," he said.

"Our Government are not a party to the Treaty of Fez and therefore cannot call upon the French Government to inform us in advance of any decisions they might make on the matter." — Reuter.

Knowland Gives His Verdict: UN Seat For Peking Would Be Green Light For Communism

Washington, Oct. 26.

Senator William F. Knowland (Republican, California) said today that he thought the seating of Communist China in the United Nations in the balance of Asia.

Senator Knowland, Republican leader in the Senate, returned home recently after a six-week trip around the world. His remarks appeared in a copyright interview with the U.S. News and World Report, an independent weekly news magazine published in Washington.

He said that allowing Communist China into the United Nations "would be taken as a seattle-and-run policy on the part of the free world."

He added: "I think it would definitely break the morale of the people in the balance of Asia who are prepared to resist Communism, so that they would feel that there was nothing much left for them to do but to go hand-in-hand to the Kremlin or to Peking and make the best deal that they could."

Senator Knowland found some concern in the Far East as to "whether we will continue to resist the admission of Communist China into the United Nations."

"I think," he said, "that those nations realize the consequences that would flow from any such act, because most of the anti-Communists in the Far East recognize, I believe, that the mere admission of Communist China into the United Nations would not satisfy the Communists either at Peking or in the Kremlin in Moscow."

"They would immediately then press for Chinese Communist membership on the Security Council. That would require the removal of the Republic of China membership on the Security Council and membership in the United Nations, and even that would not satisfy them because they would then claim that as the legally recognised member of the United Nations they should have possession of Formosa."

NOT REALISTIC

Commenting on India and its advance of seating Communist China in the United Nations, Senator Knowland said: "I don't believe that it is realistic for (Prime Minister) Nehru to think that if all the rest of the world went behind the Iron Curtain, the ruthless man in the Kremlin would respect his desire to be an isolated island of freedom in an otherwise totalitarian world."

Asked if Japan's trade with Communist China would increase, Senator Knowland said: "Undoubtedly the pressures for trade are going to increase as the years go by," and he continued: "Up to the present time the Japanese have abided substantially by our strategic list but there has been some trade going on in the so-called non-strategic materials."

He noted that China was a natural market for Japan and commented: "That's one of the things that make it so difficult."

Senator Knowland added: "On the other hand, I believe that the most realistic Japanese believe that they would be in mortal peril if they should develop all their trade or substantially all of it with Communist China, because they know that at some time when it would suit the men in Peking or the Kremlin, they could cut Japan off overnight and bring about a tremendous economic dislocation with its political and economic repercussions."

Senator Knowland added: "So I don't think they want to be in the position of a butterfly, flitting completely enmeshed in the web of the Communist spider."

NOT SPOKESMAN

Referring again to India, Senator Knowland said it would be a great mistake for the non-Communist world to regard Prime Minister Nehru as the spokesman for all Asia.

"Certainly Nehru does not speak for the Republic of Korea, for Japan, for free China on Formosa, for Thailand, Vietnam, Laos or Cambodia. And he certainly doesn't speak for Pakistan," Senator Knowland added.

"I think that the only countries that he might be said to speak for with some authority, or at least represent their views, would be India itself, Indonesia, which is also neutralist in its outlook, and perhaps Burma."

"In those countries he might be considered a spokesman, but I think it would be a serious mistake for our own policy people or those in the other Foreign Ministries of the world to look upon Mr. Nehru as the authentic spokesman for all of Asia."

Officers Express Concern

London, Oct. 26. The Council of the Navigators and Engineer Officers Union today recommended greater priority for naval requirements, particularly anti-submarine ships and devices, because of the rapid expansion of the Soviet Navy—"our only potential enemy."

In a report to the Union's annual meeting the Council said Russia was reliably estimated to have over 300 submarines in commission.

The report said "The Navy's primary function is to protect commerce against attack. It is a defensive instrument and it is essential that the Navy be provided without delay with the necessary ships and equipment to carry out this function should the necessity arise."

The Council expressed concern that most of the planes sailing part in the Fleet Air Arm fleet were "of obsolescent piston-engined types" instead of jets. — Reuter.

THE DUKE WILL FLOODLIGHT A NEW WORLD

By LES ARMOUR

London. Canada's Northwest Territories. The world has come to regard them as a vast area of ice and snow, unfit for human habitation, and blessed only with scattered deposits of minerals. Few people know that wheat can be grown inside the Arctic Circle; that summers on the Arctic Ocean are often warmer than summers in London; that the territories could eventually support a population as big as Australia's.

Awe-inspiring

Already there are cows in Akivik on the Arctic shore, an oil refinery at Norman Wells near the Arctic Circle, farmsteads north of the Alberta border, and thriving mining communities at Yellowknife, on Great Slave Lake, and at Port Hamilton, on Great Bear Lake. Churchill, on Hudson's Bay, is probably Canada's fastest growing port. The two big lakes—Great Bear and Great Slave—are virtually inland seas. Their sombre waters, whipped by the prevailing winds, are an awe-inspiring sight. On the eastern end of Great Bear—1,700 miles from the end of the world—is a place which used to be called Eldorado. Prospectors found picnicking there in 1930. For 14 years they struggled against all the obstacles to build a new community and to build a new economy. Then the Government took it over and called it Port Radium. Now it is a real Eldorado—one of the world's richest sources of uranium.

Possibilities

That is where the Duke of Edinburgh comes in. Canada's "settled" country is a narrow strip, 3,000 miles long and less than 200 miles wide along the American border. The rest of the country has limitless possibilities: millions of acres of good farmland, untold deposits of minerals, lakes teeming with marketable fish. But the land is too far from the markets, the minerals too far from cheap transportation, the fish marketable only if it is flown to dinner tables 1,500 or 2,000 miles away. The rest of the territories—1,200,000 square miles—are almost deserted. About 10,000 men, women and children live there. Most of them are hunters and trappers—European settlers operating from the tiny trading posts, and Indian and Eskimo who lead a nomadic (though nowadays, secure) life, covering a thousand miles and more in a year. But they have faith in their world is as badly in need of future. They will welcome the Duke of Edinburgh as an ally.

DREAMS ARE OUT AMONG THE SPIRES

OXFORD—they call this the Home of Lost Causes. It is also the Lair of the Well Turned Phrase.

Describing the modern "dons," the men who do the teaching and who set the trend and tone of the whole place, one of the most brilliant scientists now at Oxford said to me: "There is very little deadwood nowadays in the Senior Common Room of my college. But when I first came here—it was a Petrified Forest!"

And the undergraduates? Oxford has been called The City of Dreaming Spires. But today dreams are out. Now it is strictly the City of Striving Aspirants. Everyone works very hard.

Just 30 years ago this month Rene MacColl "went up to Oxford" for the first time as an undergraduate. Now, as the first term of the new academic year starts, he takes his notebook back there again to re-new acquaintance with the 1953 version of his old university.

By RENE MacCOLL

Life is sober, earnest, money is scarce, and frivolity hardly the thing. Outside the offices of the British Council in St Giles Street they have a notice which says: "Party centuries of Chinese calligraphy. Illustrated in the works of Tsue Ta-Tee and Chang Ming-Tse."

St Giles, where in my time, during spirits were wont to climb the Martyr's Memorial on Guy Fawkes night and place household utensils atop it. Why, I never even heard of Tsue Ta-Tee. There's evidence of a mispent youth for you! I'm standing in the porters' lodge at Somerville College (for of course they have a porters' and not a porter there, the Oxford women's institutions, and women themselves still being regarded as something of a Lost Cause by the rest of the university) when the telephonings.

The porters' answers, and says no, Miss So-and-so isn't here any more. Yes, she's left. The caller apparently asks why she's gone, because the porter then says in a neutral explanation, "Oh, she's come here time here." "What an odd remark! But even with the present austerity and hard work and so forth, it can't be quite as bad as all that, surely?"

ONE DUCK

That was me

And talking of odd remarks, there was a lulu made by one of this year's freshmen crop of undergraduates. She had won an exhibition, which is a form of scholarship at her college. And she caused a certain amount of consternation by approaching the principal and asking innocently: "Please, what is the correct gown for an exhibitionist to wear?"

From Somerville let's amble over to Lady Margaret Hall, another women's college (they have 180 of the girls, who play 255 a year in the struggle to achieve a Bachelor of Arts degree). But before I tell you of the rather disconcerting thing that happened to me there, there are one or two points of nostalgic interest to show you.

DANGER TO A MOTHER AS THE SNOW MELTED

By EDWARD CLARK

AN Englishwoman stood beside a coffin on a Norwegian roadside. Inside the coffin were (allegedly) a Jewish woman and a child.

The Englishwoman, doing a job for the Norwegian Resistance, was helping to smuggle the two away from the Nazis. But on a dark, snow-swept roadside German soldiers had commandeered their lorry, and the coffin was put out in the snow.

Helen Astrup, widow of a Norwegian sea captain, was waiting for the lorry to return. And she had for company three Nazi soldiers, one of them a young man with a roving eye. When will that lorry come? Helen Astrup sensed that something was wrong and suddenly she realised what it was. The snow was white everywhere except on the coffin.

The heat of the live bodies inside was betraying their presence. Soon it would be impossible for the Nazis not to notice.

Mrs Astrup, feigning illness, stumbled across and sat on the coffin lid. The young German sat down beside her—look her in the face. "It is not always polite to refuse a well-meant invitation," he told her.

WITHOUT MARY....

● The man who became a millionaire says: "It would have been SO different."

"WITHOUT my wife," says Bernard Sunley, who sounds faintly American and looks like one of the nicer Roman emperors, "I should not have got far."

What he means is that without Mary Sunley's help and prompting he would not be the snappy, dynamic millionaire he is today, with 35 trading posts dotted all over the free world, and El Greco painting with a fortune in his St John's Wood vestibule, and 3,000 acres of hobby farmland in Northamptonshire.

Between eight and 13 Sunley saved £50 in odd shillings and half-crowns as a runner and run-about boy at Ealing Dean cricket club.

On leaving elementary school he bought a horse and cart and delivered turf for gardeners and layers of sports greens at five shillings a load. Today in his 43rd year, head of Blackwood Hodges (Northampton), he sells new-type excavating and earth-removing machines to the world at large. "I am a muck shifter," he says modestly.

Some of his machines cost three-quarters of a million each. To call Sunley a millionaire is understatement. Taking into account his London real estate and other holdings he must be well on the way to being a millionaire, twice over.

Mary decided

To sort out how much of this is Mary Sunley's doing or inspiration, we must go back to 1928, the year they met. Mary Goddard was a fair-haired, blue-eyed 17-year-old, youngest among nine brothers and sisters. Her father farmed a thousand acres at Southall, Middlesex. Mary helped on the farm.

One of her jobs was to hitch a trailer to the family car and haul 200 gallons of Goddard milk to the dairyman's depot every morning.

Father was quite a success, football coach at a local school. Her three farmer brothers were also successful. Watch success at close quarters, Mary decided, "I decided," she recalls, "that when the time came to marry, I'd marry a man who was going to get somewhere."

Her first encounter with Bernard Sunley was at a Harwell tennis club. He talked with roll about his turf-shifting, how he meant to be a gardening contractor next and something bigger after that. Here was the drive, the self-confidence she had been looking for. To clinch matters they fell in love.

The youngster's business drive was noted and admired by others in the Goddard home. Mother lent him £100 to finance an early landscape gardening contract. One of the Goddard brothers let him use his farm lorry on turf-moving jobs and was in no hurry about sending in hire bills.

The prodigy

WITHIN a year Sunley was known as a business prodigy. At 18½ he received the first of several offers from shrewd men who wanted him to enter into partnerships of one sort or another. This first approach had something to do with grocery shops.

"What do you say, Mary?" inquired Sunley. "What I say is Don't. Stay as you are. It's better to build up from something small of your own than to muddle yourself by sharing something bigger with somebody else."

Two years later they married. Sunley was worth £20,000 and, true to his wife's prescription, MARY SUNLEY. She said: No partners.

his own boss still. He has retained his own boss, abjuring business partnerships, ever since. Most of the Blackwood Hodges shares are owned by himself, Mary and other members of the family. There are three young Sunleys—John, 20, who was a 1951 debutante, John, 17, who went straight from Harrow to national service with the Royal Marines, and 15-year-old Annabella.

Their first home was an office-bungalow which they built for themselves on the Great West Road at Brentford.

Here Mary Sunley had her first insight into the tactics of entertaining. Late one sharp winter afternoon a party of potential customers dropped in, out of the blue from Highbury, the reception-office-cum-private lounge she built a blazing fire, served the highest of high teas, and talked to her guests as if they were all friends of the family.

In the outcome of hospitable coyness coupled with business plavoy, Sunley got a plum contract to return the Arsenal football ground. This led to a "similar" contract for the White City.

A year or two later he burst into civil engineering and borrowed half a million to set up as a dealer in bulldozers and other new-fangled plant. His pace, which the 17-year-old Mary Goddard had never dreamt of.

They talk first

HER entertainment technique is much the same today as twenty years ago on Sunley's island, as their Brentford property came to be called.

She has her husband's customers and high-power associates telling her in next to no time all about their gardens, golf handicaps, car troubles, wives, children and the children's little ailments. "I never talk about high-falutin'," she explains.

When business is talked she does not flounder. As part-owner and director of Blackwood Hodges, she attends all the monthly board meetings, listens to progress reports not only from the home front, but also from 35 selling subsidiaries overseas, often puts in a word during discussions.

Sunley has been known to spring new projects upon his eight co-directors without warning or preparation. Usually, however, he first talks things over with his wife by the fire-side, scounding her views, considering any objections or counter-ideas she may raise.

"If we agree," she says, "the project goes forward to the next board meeting.... No I'm not one of these run-of-the-mill directors. I don't say I could go out and sell a walking-drug-line (they're horribly costly and bite 50 tons of earth at a time), off my own bat. But I do keep myself up to the minute as to what goes on. I do take a real part in the business."

A mink? No

I ASKED Bernard Sunley to sum up. "Mary," he said, "is very sensible, a pretty good judge of character. She has a great sense of the value of money, isn't for over rushing out to buy herself a new mink coat. (Now I come to think of it, she hasn't got a mink coat at all. She never wanted one.) And she's so wonderfully calm. She has such a tranquil temperament. On the brink of a new venture I have always talked things over with her. I value her judgments. She has helped immensely. I can only repeat what I told you to begin with. I've come a long way. But without Mary I shouldn't have got far."

MONTY MEETS "THE REST"

Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery shakes hands with the "Rest of the World" team before the start of the Football Association's 90th Anniversary match at Wembley which England drew 4-4 with the FIFA team.

The Football Association Is 90 Years Old

By J.W. TAYLOR

On October 26, ninety years ago, representatives of 11 England football clubs, including the "W. O. War Office," met at the Freemason's Tavern in Great Queen Street, London, and resolved "that the clubs represented at this meeting now form themselves into an Association to be called 'The Football Association.'" This done, the minutes of the meeting recorded: "Whereupon the following clubs were enrolled: N. N. Kilburn, Barnes, W. O. War Office, Crusaders, Forest Leytonstone, and (the joint) Percival House and Blackheath."

Thus did a small group of club representatives lay the foundations of the English Football Association, one of the most powerful sporting forces in the world, whose reputation for clean, fair and efficient government of the sport is universally admired. So well and harmoniously has it conducted its own affairs that in the 90 years of its existence there have been three secretaries, including Sir Stanley Rous, the present one, and changes in its laws have been equally few and are looked upon as a model the world over.

The present impressive structure of the Football Association is divided into 43 county associations, each controlling its own county cup competition, subject to ordinary FA regulations, and organising it within its particular area with only friendly intervention from FA headquarters in the event of a difficult problem requiring expert solution.

A SMALL PART Indeed, only a small part of the FA's work is concerned with the big professional clubs, for to it the small amateur clubs from whose ranks the stars of the future emanate are just as important as the clubs of national and international fame. What's more, the FA believe that football would still continue in Britain, even if all the big clubs were to cease activities overnight. As many as 23,500 clubs are today in membership with and governed by the FA, only 88 of them being Football League Clubs; the other four League Clubs, the other four League Clubs, Swansea and Wrexham being, of course, members of the Welsh Football Association, which has representative contact with the FA in London.

The first recognised home of the FA was in Holborn Viaduct. Three other lots of premises were used until finally in 1929 they moved to the present headquarters in Lancaster Gate.

Here the registration department has the personal records of nearly 7,000 professional players and an administrative staff with many tasks and problems to deal with, including an incoming mail of 700 letters a day. They are still indulgently kind towards their most regular correspondent who apparently bears some grudge against the Arsenal. Soon this will be swelled by impassioned pleas for Cup Final tickets which receive the same treatment—a printed card of regret. It is essentially the English Football Association, for it has no control over the game outside England. It is, of course, in membership with FIFA, the international body, and co-operates for the good of the game throughout the world. Its powers, however, do not extend beyond the English border. Scotland, Wales and Ireland have their own associations which work independently of, but in close co-operation with, the English FA.

THE DIFFERENCE There is, of course, the English Football League organisation. The difference between the two is that the FA controls football generally, makes the laws, and runs international matches and some popular knockout cup competitions, whereas it is the Football League that runs the familiar league competition. The current ban on the televising of League games was purely the decision of the Football League, which is administered by the 92 professional clubs in membership with the organisation.

In fact, only a small part of the FA's work is concerned with the big professional clubs; the bulk of it is co-ordinating the work of the 43 county associations with its thousands of amateur players. In Britain there are few villages and schools that do not field their own teams, and to all the best of advice on the sport and club management is at the Lancaster Gate Headquarters for the mere asking. Nothing of note that happens in football escapes the notice of the Football Association, and whenever an authoritative remedy is needed, rest assured that Lancaster Gate will apply it, firmly, fairly, but certainly.

Signs Of Impatience Justified

London Oct. 26.

The Times today argued that signs of French impatience with Vietnam were understandable.

A profound and unpleasant sensation was caused in France

when the Vietnam National Congress resolved that Vietnam could not associate with the French Union as now constituted, this independent paper said.

"So long as the special intimacy between France and the Associated States (of Indo-China), which is the real purpose of the Union concept, is preserved, many Frenchmen think that the Government should persevere in building up the forces of the Associated

States until they are strong enough to hold the Vietnam movement.

But in spite of the help that

America is giving in money and munitions, few people think that France can be expected to sustain the drain on her manpower much longer.

"At present casualties among officers almost equal the annual output from St. Cyr (the French Military Academy); while the time so dearly bought by this sacrifice benefits not herself but the Associated States.

"Small wonder then if she shows signs of impatience with what President Aduol recently called privily and a bargaining spirit if it shows itself in the negotiations, which are designed to give the Associated States their independence." The Times concluded—China Mail Special.
